WELCOME

The Korea Society in 2014 broadened the focus of its policy programs and national programs, while continuing its touchstone arts and cultural activities. We also continued the longstanding and highly popular educational exchanges for students and teachers in the United States and Korea and developed further our young professional programs. The Korea Society's Annual Report for 2014 highlights in more detail these and other activities.

In May, we held our Annual Dinner at the Plaza Hotel where we presented the General James A. Van Fleet Award to two visionary corporate leaders, Marilyn A. Hewson and Yongmaan Park. As the Chairman, President, and CEO of Lockheed Martin Corporation, and the Chairman and CEO of Doosan Group, respectively, both Hewson and Park have tremendously advanced business ties and contributed to the industrial cooperation between the two nations. Hewson delivered the keynote address in which she emphasized the importance of education, cooperation, and investment as the three ways to accelerate innovation and partner for mutual success.

In the policy area we launched a series called The Analysts in response to President Park Geun-hye's visit to New York and the United Nations. The series took place at The Korea Society in New York City and invited some of the nation's brightest thought leaders on Korea, including the American Enterprise Institute's Nicholas Eberstadt, Center for a New American Security's Dr. Patrick Cronin, Columbia University's Dr. Sue Mi Terry, the Kim Koo-Korea Foundation Professor Sung-Yoon Lee, United Nations Security Council's William Newcomb, Harvard Belfer Center's John Park, and Ambassador Stephen Bosworth. Furthermore, we hosted a discussion with Amnesty International's Frank Jannuzi on the UN Commission of Inquiry Report on North Korea.

Our national programs last year sought to broaden our outreach and raise awareness of Korea around the United States. To that end we partnered with the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation at the University of Montana and the University of Oregon with policy focused activities, and with the University of Minnesota with a Korean cultural program. In addition, in Washington, D.C., The Korea Society board member and retired U.S. Army General Walter Sharp joined me to speak on the US-Korea relationship.

We also continued our cultural and educational programs and partnered with institutions such as Lincoln Center, Brooklyn Academy of Music, American Museum of Natural History, and the Seoul Museum of Art. Highlighting a number of Korean cultural treasures, our programs offered film screenings, book talks, musical performances, painting workshops, family days, and cooking demonstrations. We also coordinated Korea visits for American students and teachers, and provided networking opportunities for young professionals.

We would like to thank all of our members, both individual and corporate, who made these programs possible, and encourage their participation in the coming year as we further strengthen our programming and more firmly establish The Korea Society as the premier forum in the United States for issues concerning Korea.

ANNUAL DINNER

The Korea Society hosted its 57th annual dinner on Tuesday, May 6, at The Plaza in New York City. Marillyn A. Hewson, Chairman, President, and CEO of Lockheed Martin Corporation, delivered the evening's keynote speech, suggesting education, cooperation and investment as "three areas where we should all keep pushing the boundaries, setting bold goals and chasing the horizons of the next great breakthrough." The Republic of Korea's Minister of Foreign Affairs, H.E. Mr. Yun Byung-se, in New York for meetings as President of the UN Security Council, also addressed the audience.

The evening recognized the close partnership between the U.S. and Korea, and the Society presented its James A. Van Fleet Award to two visionary corporate leaders, Marillyn A. Hewson and Yongmaan Park, Chairman and CEO of Doosan Group, who both have advanced business ties and contributed to industrial cooperation between the two countries.

Recent highlights include The Analysts, a series featuring the nation's foremost thought leaders on Korea, and the standup of the Kim Koo Foundation-Korea Society Professional Series, educating influence makers from media, Park Avenue, and the UN.

Interest in Korean cuisine has been growing among Americans in recent years. To address that trend and provide a greater awareness of Korean foods, The Korea Society hosts many cookbook releases, cooking demonstrations, and hands-on workshops for members and guests to enjoy. In 2014, The Korea Society invited chefs and culinary instructors to teach and share recipes for mandoo, bibim guksu, aehobak jeon, oi naengguk, patbingsu, Chuseok rice cakes, and maeungtang.

EXHIBITIONS

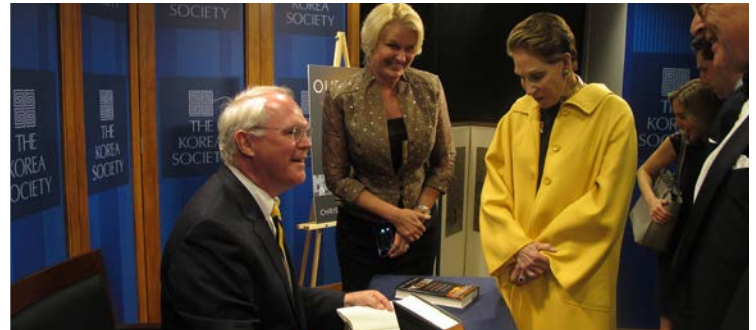

The Korea Society Gallery hosted four exhibitions of Korean art in 2014. We displayed works by some of Korea's most prominent contemporary ceramic artists, including pieces by Yoon Kwang Cho and Kim Yik Yung, both recipients of the National Museum of Modern and Contemporary Art's Artist of the Year award. Through a partnership with the New York Society of Etchers, the Korean Contemporary Printmakers Association, and The School of Visual Arts, we presented prints by both Korean and American artists. That exhibition, called "Made in New York/Made in Seoul," also travelled to the Seoul Museum of Art's Gyeonghuigung Annex. We honored Lee Sneider, who, in the 1980's, co-produced the first-ever exhibition of Korean folk art in the West, with an exhibition of selections from her collection. Our final exhibition of the year looked at the legacy of Po Kim, founder of the Department of Fine Arts at Chosun University and The Sylvia Wald and Po Kim Art Foundation in New York City. "Po Kim: A Memorial Tribute" included personal objects, such as paintbrushes and writings, in addition to artwork.

FILM

The Korea Society ensures that Korean films are featured prominently in the cultural life of New York City. Sample programs included a partnership with Lincoln Center to present Noh Young-seok's Intruders in their Film Comment Selects series. Samuel Jamier, co-director of the New York Asian Film Festival, Nicolas Archambault, Director of Asian Programming for the Fantasia International Film Festival, and Tom Vick, Curator of Film of the Freer and Sackler Galleries at the Smithsonian Institution, visited the Society for a panel discussion on the current state of Korean film in North America. We presented three films at the New York Asian Film Festival, including one by Kim Ki-duk, and brought director Lee Su-jin to the Museum of Modern Art for a screening of his film Han Gong-ju. We closed out the year with "The Korean Horror Picture Show," a Halloween series of films at the Museum of the Moving Image.
